Col, North's String of Racing Horses Stood the Voyage Well.

The White Star line's freighter Tauric, which sailed from Liverpool Jan. 27, arrived at her pier in the North River, at the foot of Christopher street, at 19 o'clock this morning, after the most continuously tempestuous voyage the ship ever endured. The Tauric was due Peb. 7, her average time for her last three trips being ten and a half days.

There had been much speculation in shipping circles as to the cause of the Tauric's delay, and grave fears were expressed in some quarters for her safety. The White Star agents, however, advanced the theory that Capt. Ward was proceeding cautiously in the face of exceeding rough seas, or else that the ship had suffered some accident.

The former theory proved to be correct. Capt. Ward left the ship shortly after she was docked, and could not be found by reporters. Members of the crew, however, talked of the voyage, and all pronounced it one of the roughest in all their experience an the ocean. Twelve hours out from Liverpool the Tauric encountered a tale which increased to a hurrican within a few hours. A blinding snew storm also set in. The waves rolled very high, threatening to wash overboard the seamen who remained at their posts of duty.

The decks had been closed in anticipation of the storm, and consequently nothing of importance was washed overboard.
